When the HEN our Friends lead us into Actions which are beneficial to others, they lay on us the highest Honour of human Life, and bring us under the greatest Obligations to themselves; if therefore I am so happy as to do some service to any by this Sermon, I am at least equally bound with them to thank You, by whose Influence it was at first composed and preached, and is now offered to the World. Excuse me, Sir, that I make this publick Acknowledgment, and that I take the liberty to say 'tis a very sensible Pleasure to me to observe, that your generous Inclination to every thing which may advance the A 2

Common Good; your Affection for Truth, and Justice, and pure Religion; and your unshaken Zeal and Stedfastness in the Cause you have espous'd; have always made you more known and more useful than even all the Advantages of your flourishing Circumstances in the World; and that they will no doubt continue to draw on you the Esteem of all who have the Happiness of your Acquaintance.

Permit me, Sir, to assure you, that nothing but the most sincere Respect makes me lay hold on this Opportunity, and at the same time heartily wish for a better, wherein more effectually to convince you how much, and how unfeignedly

MATTH. V. 8.

Blessed are the Pure in Heart, for they shall see God.

HESE Words are part of our Saviour's most excellent Sermon upon the Mount, very opposite to the Traditions and Practices of the Scribes and Pharisees; and yet preach'd to a numerous Assembly of Persons, who were much devoted to those Teachers, or rather Corrupters of the Law. The Jews had been long taught to have their Wisemen, as they call'd them, in high efteem; and were told, that whofoever contradicted his Teachers, did as bad as if he contradicted God himself; nay, by a Law of theirs, whoever refused to obey the Wisemen was to be put to death. But notwithstanding this Slavery of Mind they were under, and the Meanness of Spirit they must have thereby contracted; notwithstanding the mighty Reverence they had for their spiritual Guides, and the unspeakable Power of the Prejudices in which they had been educated: our Saviour preach'd this Sermon in direct opposition to those Prejudices and those Guides; and such was the Excellency and Reasonableness of the Matter of it, and such the Force and Manner of his delivering it to them, as bore down all Opposition. Of the most Riff stiff and obstinate, his Hearers became soft and pliable; their usual fiery Zeal for their Traditions was strangely cool'd and moderated; their high Regard for, and stupid Submission to, their Doctors, was leffen'd and abated: and when the Divine Preacher had ended his Discourse, the People were astonish'd at his Doctrine, Mat. vii. 28. amaz'd at his Wisdom and Goodness, and greatly affected with the Charms of his Discourse, and the Beauty and Reasonableness of his Precepts; which appear'd to them very strong and evident, notwithstanding they had been so long us'd to hear, with the profoundest Respect and Veneration, such as understood very little of his Doctrine, and had taught them many things contrary to it. But this new Teacher taught them (not as the Scribes and Pharisees, who continually appeal'd to their Wisemen, and those of old time, confirming what they advanc'd by their Testimony; but he taught them) as one having an uncommon and more than ordinary Authority, in demonstration of the Spirit and of Our Lord, the better to answer the Design for which he came into the World, being fent most immediately and first to the Jews, took a great deal of Care and Pains to rectify the Abuses and Corruptions which then prevail'd among that People, and gave him such just occasion to complain, that they did in vain worship God, teaching for Doctrines the Commandments of Men; laying aside and rejecting the Commandments of God, to keep their own Traditions, thereby making the Word of God of none effect; Mark vii. 7—13. He very frequently inveighs against the Hypocrify and Superstition, the Blindness and Ignorance, nay the Irreligion and Immorality, not lo much of the common People, as of their learned Scribes, their fanctify'd Pharifees, and the Holy Order of Priests, who boasted of a sacred Character, to which they were a Reproach. Our Saviour continually fet himself in opposition to these Men, as well knowing that most of the Errors and Corruptions of the common People take their rife chiefly from this Source: for it is very certain that the Teachers of the People are almost the sole Spring and Fountain-Head of all the Vertue or Vice which prevails amongst them. Accordingly in the 7th of Mark our Lord, after having reproached them with many of their Traditions, calls the People to him, and fays, ver. 14. Hearken unto me every one of you; and so proceeds to shew them the Error of their Teachers. And thus likewise this Sermon, which, as far as appears, is the longest our Saviour ever preached, is pointed directly against several of the corrupt Glosses, and false Doctrines, and human Traditions, which were then generally received by the People, as being diligently advanced and enforced by their Teachers. Thus our Lord fays to 'em, ver. 21. Te have heard that it was said, and so forth; and then, ver. 22. adds, But I say unto you, and so on. The same kind of Opposition he again uses several times afterwards. Nay, he had so much contradicted the receiv'd Opinions of that time, that he thought it necessary to caution his Hearers against a Mistake they might on that account be ready to run into; and to affure 'em that his Doctrines, whatever they might think of 'em, did not at all tend to fet aside the Law, but only to restore it to its native Purity and Simplicity, and to rescue it from the Misinterpretations and mischievous Abuses put upon it by their blind Guides: for think not, fays he ver. 17. that I am come to destroy the Law or the Prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil; to establish, and confirm, and improve them in Truth and Righteousness: but you are not to think the false Glosses and Traditions of the Elders are the Law, or agreeable to it, or that by the Observation of those heavy Burdens which the Scribes and Pharisees impose upon you, you can be justify'd before God, and accounted Keepers of the Law. deceiv'd, for I say unto you, That except your Righteousness shall exceed the Righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; ver. 20.

I SAY these things here, concerning our Saviour's opposing the Notions of the Jewish Doctors, because this is the true Key to the understanding of our Saviour's whole Discourse, and (judiciously used) will let us into the true Meaning of the feveral Parts of this excellent Sermon. At present we are particularly to confine our felves to that part only which I read at first for my Text, in these words; Blessed are the pure in Heart, for they shall see God. And in order to come at their true full Sense and Meaning, it must be remember'd, that when God gave the Law to the Fews by his Servant Moses, to create in them the greater Awe and Reverence of his Person, and of the Purity and Holiness of his Nature and his Precepts, he gave feveral Rules and Laws to be observed concerning bodily Uncleannesses of divers kinds, from which all were to keep themselves free as much as might be; and if at any time they were polluted, they were to be cleanfed and purified by certain Rites and Ceremonies which God appointed for that purpose. Great part of the Book of Leviticus is commonly enough known to be made up of Laws concerning these things: The greatest part of the 11th Chapter is taken up in distinguishing between those which were to be accounted clean or unclean Meats; and the whole 13th and 14th in prescribing several Rules and Laws concerning the Plague of Leprofy, and its Legal Purification both in the Bodies of Men, and in the Walls of their Houses. A great part of the 19th Chapter of the Book of Numbers contains the Laws and Manner of purifying from the Pollutions contracted by the Touch of one flain with a Sword in the open Fields, or a dead Body, or a Bone of a Man, or a Grave: and of the Legal Uncleanness of the Tent wherein any Man died, and of all Things and Persons therein at that time, or which should be brought in during the continuance of the dead Body there. There are also many Rules and Laws concerning the Purification and Dedication of the Holy Veffels, which were to be used in their Divine Service;

vice; and of the Priests, in order to their approaching to God and his Sanctuary. And all the People likewise were at certain times, upon some special and extraordinary Occasions, to be universally cleanfed and purified before they could approach to God; for at the giving the Law, Exod. xix. 10. the Lord faid unto Moses, Go unto the People, and sanctify themand let them wash their Clothes, and be ready, --- forthe Lord will come down in the fight of all the Peorle. And so again when God was to lead the Isr selites miraculoufly over Jordan at the beginning or Joshua's Ministry, Joshua said unto the People, Sauctify your selves, for to-morrow the Lord will do Wonders among you; Josh.111.5. These, with many other things of the like nature, were required of the Jews by Divine Authority, as what might fignify to them, and tend to raise in their Minds fuitable Notions and Acknowledgments of the transcendent Purity and Holiness of that God with whom they had to do, and their own Meanness and Impurity, and their Unworthiness to come into the Presence of so holy a Being. But perverting the Defign of these things, they soon rested entirely in the bare external Performances, which is a more easy and showy fort of Religion, than that which is internal and spiritual, and consists in the Purity of the Heart, and Regularity of the Manners. Hence they became to excessively fond of these external Rites and Ceremonies, that tho they were already lufficiently numerous by Divine Appointment, yet by the addition of many other empty Fancies of their own, they so greatly increas'd their Number, that they grew into an immense Body: Of this fort were all those Washings of Pots, and Cups, and Beds, and brazen Vessels, and Tables; with which, and many other fuch like things, our Saviour reproaches them in They accounted themselves to be defiled by conversing with other Men, and therefore constantly wash'd themselves when they return'd from Market, or any publick Places of Refort: They also thought it a great Pollution to eat with unwashen washen Hands, which they therefore very diligently avoided to do, walking strictly according to the Tradition of the Elders: but all, as our Savicur observes, to the setting afide the Commandment of God, Mark vii. 8. Which indeed is but the natural Confequence of this great Affection for Ceremonies, as has always been very evidently feen in all Churches in which Ceremonies have been countenanced. Their great Reverence and Regard to the Traditions of their Elders took up their Thoughts so much, that they had little time to spare for better things; and by their Diligence and Exactness in tithing Mint, and Anise, and Cummin, they were run into the Neglect, I might fay the Contempt, of the weightier Matters of the Law, Mat. And thus becoming fonder of these things than of those which were better and more substantial, they substituted these in the room of true Religion; as our Saviour himself has noted in the 7th Chapter of St. Mark, and more largely in the 23d of

Matthew, as well as in many other places. THIS was the State of the Fewish Church at that time; these are the Men our Saviour opposes, and these the Practices of which he frequently complains, and to which he often opposes Purity of Heart. Thus when the Scribes and Pharifees found fault that his Disciples did not wash before they eat, after having censur'd their superstitious Washings, he calls to the misguided People, and assures them, Mark vii. 15. There's nothing from without a Man, that entring into him can defile him; but, ver. 20. that which cometh out of the Man, that defileth the Man: for from within, out of the Heart of Man proceed evil Thoughts, Adulteries, and the like; all which evil things coming from an impure Heart within, defile the Man, ver. 23. And so again in Mat. xxiii. 25, &c. he reproves the Scribes and Pharisees as Hypocrites, who took great care to make clean the Outfide of the Cup and Platter, and diligently perform all their external Purifications and Cleanfings, that so they might outwardly appear Righteous unto Men, but within were full of Extortion and Excess; or like

Sepulchres full of dead Mens Bones, and all Uncleanness, they were full of Hypocrify and Iniquity: but thou blind Pharisee, says he, ver. 26. learn of them, who not content with cleanfing the Outfides of their Vessels, as if that made them thorowly clean, take more care of cleanfing especially the Infide of the Cup and Platter; and do thou in like manner first cleanse and purify thy Heart and thy Affections, and then all thy Defigns and Actions which flow from thence will be just and pure: This is superior to all thy external Purifications, and the only way to be truly clean and holy, and to become the proper Objects of God's Favour, and entitled to all the Blessings he will bestow on the true spiritual Seed of Abraham. So again in our Text, our Saviour, knowing that the Minds of the People were fill'd with Notions of the Necessity of the divers Washings requir'd and practis'd by the Pharifees, and the great Holiness they imagin'd to follow thereupon, took occasion to recommend to them Purity of Heart, as a thing far more excellent and advantageous than all external Purity: as if he had said, Think not that these Externals can avail you any thing, whatever itrefs your Teachers may lay on them; at best they are in themselves of very little consideration: but bleffed indeed are the pure in Heart, for they shall see God; they are not only his true Worshippers here, and fit to be admitted into his Temple and Sanctuary, but they shall even be admitted into the Holy of Holies above the Heavens, into the Presence of the Almighty, and fee and converse with him face to face.

But now having thus largely shewn that our Saviour in our Text opposes Purity of Heart, i. e. internal Religion, to external Rites and Ceremonies, and all outward Performances; it may not be amiss here to lay down and enlarge upon an Observation which naturally arises from hence; which is this:

THAT the most diligent and punctual Performance of the positive Institutions and external Parts of Religion, be B 2

they otherwise ever so necessary and useful, are altogether useless and insignificant, without a suitable inward Disposition, and Purity of Heart and Mind. You ought not to think it strange that I propose this Observation to be enlarg'd on in a Christian Audience. It is true, confidering things abstractedly and in themselves, it should seem very unnecessary; and I heartily wish it was fo indeed, and that there was no occasion to discourse on this Subject, as to be sure there would not be, if the pure true Religion of the blessed Jesus could prevail in the World: whereas all who are, tho but little, conversant with Mankind, and acquainted with the present unhappy State of Christianity, know very well that pretended or weak Chriftians have given too much reason to the Preachers of the Gospel to treat this matter very largely: and it were to be wish'd they did it more frequently too, with proper Earnestness, and a due Concern for the Interest and unfullied Honour of our most holy Religion; that so at last a step might be effectually put to a dangerous growing Mischief, a fatal Canker, which has not only spread it self over the whole face of Christianity, but has almost eat out its very Heart, and render'd it lifelefs, foul and contemptible.

In the profecution of the Subject I have at present

pitch'd upon, I will take this Method:

I. I will shew you, that Christians do generally too much rest in the Performance of the external Parts of Religion. And,

II I will prove to you the Truth of my Observation.

In the first place then, 'tis too plain and visible, that Christians do generally rest in the Performance of the external Parts of Religion. They are so far gone in Corruption, that they have substituted these things in the stead of Religion. They of the Romish Church are wholly taken up with the gaudy Pomp and Geremonies, which their Vanity and Superstition, stition, the Peoples Ignorance, and the Pride, Avarice, and Crast of their designing Priests have render'd very numerous. The Shewiness and Pageantry of their solemn Processions, and indeed of every part of their publick Worship; the pretended sacred Character, and the great Power of the Priests; the Holiness of their confectated Churches, Grounds, Altars, Shrines, Vestments, Images, and the like; the pretended Usefulness of Confession, Absolution, Penances, Pilgrimages, with numberless other ridiculous Fopperies, which are hardly fit to come under the name of human Inventions, make up the Religion, and are most at the heart of the Members of that Church, to the very great Reproach and Scandal of the Christian Palicion

THE Greek Church has likewise overwhelmed and lost the holy and pure Religion they receiv'd from the Apostles, in the same wide and fathomless Ocean of vain superstitious Forms, and Ceremonies, and Idolatry; they are indeed very strict in the Obfervation of their Rituals, and all the Feafts and Fasts, Oc. which their Church imposes on them, but all under such a prodigious degree of Ignorance and Corruption, that even the Priests themselves, after a most superstitious Observation of their Fasts, immediately give themselves up to all manner of Excess and Riot; and in the actual Celebration of their holy Feafts commonly, and without any Remorfe or Senfe of Guilt, make themselves drunk for the Honour of God, and their Church, and their Saints, and even of St. John the Baptist too, whom they call the Abstemious. Monstrous! that ever Men who call themselves Christians, and are so superstitiously zealous for what they account Religion, should by any means fuffer themselves to fink into such gross Corruption and Irreligion, and be so blind as to be impos'd upon by that vile Absurdity of becoming scandalously wicked out of pure Religion! And yet this, with the Roman Church, have extended themselves over, and with their genuine Ignorance and Superstition, as with

with a thick black Cloud, have cover'd and involv's in Darkness the far greater part of the Christian World. And the it must be confess'd, that no inconfiderable part of Europe has very much reform'd i felf from the gross Idolatry and Corruptions of these Churches; yet it is greatly to be lamented, that Externals are too much regarded and rely'd on even by these Reform'd Churches. Some have invented and introduc'd into their publick Worship divers Ceremonies, without any manner of real necessity, which at least seems to argue some Dependence on, and Expectation from the Performance of them; or however, if some think them useful, so far only as they may help to promote internal Religion, 'tis too certain that the Many have quite other Notions of the matter, who are very diligent to perform, or furiously zealous to defend and continue the use of these things, and for the fake of these only extol their particular Church, in opposition to all others, as perfect, holy, pure, primitive, and apostolical: while at the same time they have little regard to the Practice of Virtue and true Holiness in themselves or others, and take little or no care to reform and regulate their Lives, and to purge the Church of corrupt and even scandaloufly finful Members. So long as a Warmth for Externals only is a sufficient Recommendation to the Communion of any Church, the Body of that Church will doubtless consist of Persons, who place the main of Religion in those Externals; and therefore how frequently do we see the warmest Zealots for Ceremonies spend their Strength and Zeal upon them, and become not only indifferent, but even very cold in regard to every thing elfe that's more substantial! they will not omit the religious and devout Performance of these things, even with Hearts full of Hatred, Revenge, and Malice towards such as cannot join with them therein; and when they return from the publick Service, how frequently do they give themselves up to Debauchery, Fury, Anger, and Party-Rage, to Drunkenness, Profaneness and Irreligion, Ilgion, in all the other Parts of their Lives; a certain Demonstration that they place their Religion in these external Rites and human Compositions, which with so much Noise and Heat they uphold and impose.

Bur of these things some others are very sensible, and apt enough to complain, far more apt than they are to see and consider, that even they themselves too lie under the same Guilt: for don't too many take special care to shun the publick Churches, and reject the Forms and Ceremonies in use there, who at the same time are not so much afraid of the common Corruptions of the Profane? This is mere Peevishness and Perverseness, not Religion. Someabsent themselves from these Churches from a Dislike to the Formalities, and make their Religion confift in having no publick Worship; and I fear I might have justly said, in having no Religion. from their Averseness to the receiv'd Forms and Ceremonies of the Church, and Fashions of the World, are in reality the most formal of all, and make it essential to Religion to dress and act in every thing different from other People. Others again disown external Forms of Worship, merely because they will, and almost place their Religion in opposing and crying them down. Some, it's true, do with confrant and with seeming Devotion frequent some separate Congregation at all times of publick Worship, especially on the Lord's Day, which they take care to keep very strictly at their own Houses too; but this is only Formality, and observing Times and Seafons, in all such as take the liberty, thro the rest of the whole Week, to cheat, and undermine, and deceive, or to over-reach their Neighbours. And it must not be dissembled, that thro the prodigious Corruption of the Age, base Vices commonly prevail under the Names and Cover of Virtues; and the groffest Acts of Barbarity, Violence, and Injustice are called at least, but if Men would reason they could never be thought to be, Justice and Religion. things are not only chargeable upon the openly protane fane and profligate, but even to a great degree upon too many who deceive the World and themselves, by some external Performances of one kind or other; their Zeal for which, helps them to pass for religious Men. It concerns us all therefore to examine even our felves, and fee whether any of us be not of this number. Our Saviour had but twelve Apostles, and one of them was a Judas; so it's possible, and may be fear'd, that there may be some among us, but I hope very few, who rest in the Externals of Religion, without having a due regard to that Purity of Heart which is alone necessary to denominate us truly religious. And if we are (as indeed all ought to be) careful to preserve a good Appearance and Deportment among Men, adorning the Doctrine of God our Saviour, and diligent in the Performance of all the outward Parts of Religion; very strict in regulating all these things according to the Scriptures only, without owning any other Authority upon Earth; and as zealous in maintaining their Christian Liberty, against all the Attempts of Superstition, Tyranny, and Priestcraft: If we reject the Forms and Impositions of others, to use a more simple and plain, and let me add Primitive and Apostolick, way of worshipping God: If we are so happy as to have reviv'd, and maintain'd, and practis'd the true antient way of administring Baptism and the Lord's Supper, according to our Lord's own Institution and Appointment, free from those gross Corruptions which alter and destroy their very Nature: If after all, we rest here, and are covetous, unmerciful, not forgiving Injuries or Debtors, under the notion of demanding our Right, and doing our felves Justice; griping and oppressing the Poor in our Dealing with them, under pretence that it's every one's Business in Bargaining and Trade to do the best he can for himfelf, and confider his own Interest only: If we make no Conscience of injuring our Neighbour by open Calumny and Reproach, or by fecret Whisperings and Backbirings, or scandalous and malicious Surmifes

Surmises and Misrepresentations, by Censoriousness and all manner of private Injuries: If this be the Case of any, what such call Religion is abominable Hypocrisy. And it is evident to Demonstration, that they lay too much stress on, and place the whole of their Religion in those things wherein they differ from others: for such as are only zealous in the point of Baptism, for instance, or a Set of speculative Opinions, must think these are the Substance of Religion, or else that these will atone for the want of every

But to proceed yet further: I fear there is too much reason to suspect that some who are accounted pious good Men, and are indeed careful to perform many Parts of external Religion and Devotion, and divers Acts of Charity and Beneficence; diligent to do many Parts of their Duty to God and their Neighbour; who laying too great stress upon these things, fall yet far short of Religion: for are not some, even of these Men, proud, and haughty, and insolent, letting loofe the Reins to their Passion and Revenge, which they likewise run into many times for very Trifles? Are not some of these Men very earnest in the pursuit of the World and the Advantages thereof, guilty of Extortion, and greedy to take all Advantages of those they deal with, and that in pure Wantonness or Covetousness, not out of the necessity of their own Circumstances? And don't they frequently from thence run themselves into the Guilt of defrauding, tricking, and undermining those about them; and to gain their End, and increase their Store, use all the little Artifices and ungenerous mean Actions, which pass commonly for Shrewdness, Cunning, and good Management, and the like Virtues, in the eyes of the Children of this World? which, however, are look'd on with Scorn, and Contempt, and Abhorrence by the wifer Children of Light, who plainly fee that all these things are highly displeasing to the God of Holiness and Purity, and greatly below and inconfistent with the Dignity of Human Nature. IT

Ir may perhaps feem too harsh to some of those who are within the reach of my Charge, that I have laid it so general; but Men must not be flatter'd and footh'd into their own Ruin from this Place. What I have faid is so generally true, that I doubt not but most, upon cool Recollection, will find many Instances within their own Knowledge; for, God knows, the Forms of Godliness, of one kind or other, have almost destroy'd the Life and Power of it. This is the Case in fact, and it is in vain to deny that Christians, of all Sects and Parties, too generally depend upon external Performances alone, and commonly lay a greater stress upon those Particulars wherein they differ from others; upon some darling Practice, or Notion, or Scheme of Principles; than upon the more substantial Parts of Religion: and then are very apt to glory with the Pharifee in the Gospel, Luke xviii, 11, 12. God, I thank thee, that I am not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, or even as this Publican: I fast twice in the Week, I give Tythes of all that I possess. But God grant that none of us may be led into Destruction by this Pharifaical Spirit and Disposition of Mind; let us not deceive our felves, and hazard our Souls upon the most diligent Performances of the ceremonious and external Parts of Religion.

Tis easy to impose upon our selves in this matter; let us therefore use the utmost Caution and Diligence in trying, and examining, and purifying our own Hearts, which will always lie open to the view of that God with whom we have to do: And if we have forgotten the Name of our God, or stretched out our Hands to a strange God, shall not God search this out? for he knoweth the Secrets of our Hearts: Psal. xliv. 20, 21. Let us therefore take the Advice of holy David to his Son Solomon; I Chron. xxviii. 9. And thou Solomon, my Son, know thou the God of thy Father, and serve him with a perfect Heart, and with a willing Mind: for the Lord searcheth all Hearts, and understandeth all the Imaginations of the Thoughts; if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou for sake him, he will cast thee off for ever. And this seeking God consists in the serving him with a perfect Heart and a willing Mind, without which all other things are wholly useless and insignificant; as I am now, in the second place, to shew you. For,

II. My second general Head was to prove the Truth of the Observation I had laid down, in these words; That the most diligent and punctual Performance of the positive Institutions and external Parts of Religion, be they otherwise ever so necessary and useful, are altogether useless and insignificant, without a sutable inward Disposition, and Purity of Heart and Mind. And here a very wide Scene of Discourse opens to our view: For this Position may be very largely prov'd and establish'd both from the most clear and certain Principles of Natural Reason, and by very plain and numerous Testimonies of the highest and most undoubted Authority; namely, the Sacred Scriptures.

RELIGION is not a thing merely positive, or a matter of Institution and Command only; but is founded in the Nature and Reason of Things, and arises purely and necessarily from the Nature of God and his Creatures, and their Relation to him and to one another.

Religion strictly and abstractedly, and in the very notion of the word, signifies the Obligations of Duty we lie under towards God our Creator and Preserver. As it is in us, it is nothing else but a due sense of those Obligations; and without us, in Society, it comprehends, or rather consists in, all those Actions and religious Performances which are the external Signs and Demonstrations of, and do naturally arise from, this internal Sense in our own Minds of the Obligations we lie under. And upon a due Consideration, it will very evidently appear, that the whole efficacy of all these external Performances depends entirely upon the internal Disposition of our Minds, which alone can render them of any value, and acceptable to God.

God is a Being, beyond Imagination, great and glorious, and possess'd of all Perfections and Excel-Hence we are indispensably oblig'd, in point of Truth and Justice, to acknowledge and own that he is possess'd of these Perfections; that he is eternal, felf-existent, infinite, and immense, filling up all Time and all Space, in the full and compleat Enjoyment of all Bleffedness, and Power, and Wisdom, and Majesty. And as he is the great Creator and Governour of the Universe; as we are the Work of his Hands, and receive our Beings, with all our Faculties and Enjoyments, from the inexhauftible Source of his Bounty and Goodness; hence arise all our relative Obligations to him, as our Creator, and Preserver, and Benefactor. Thus it appears, that these are the Foundations of Religion; and when they take place, and have their proper influence upon us by Consideration and Resection, they do of course produce in us a due Sense of these Obligations; and when we think and act according thereunto, we are faid to be religious. Religion therefore is in us the making good the Obligations under which we lie towards God, entertaining very great and awful Apprehensions of his Divine Majefty, bowing our Souls with all Humility before him, and submitting our selves, our Will, and all our Thoughts entirely to his Will and Good-pleafure; from the bottom of our Souls adoring and praising his reverend and glorious Name, owning and magnifying his Power and Wisdom, acknowledging the superiour Excellence of his Nature, and the full Perfection of all his Attributes: in these things consists all true and acceptable Religion. But that which is commonly call'd external, namely all outward Actions, are but the Signs and Pictures of this; and from this they must arise, and only in proportion as they do so, they are, or can be, well-pleasing to God.

CONSIDER'D in themselves and abstractedly, they are nothing but the mere Effects of sensless Matter and Motion; and thus they are destitute of all moral or religious Good or Evil, and therefore are altogether infignificant in point of Religion: But then if consider'd as caus'd and produc'd voluntarily, by a felf-conscious and self-moving Power, with certain Views or Defigns; fo far they become, or I should rather say are denominated, virtuous or vicious, according to the Rectitude or Depravity of the internal Designs and Intentions of the Mind from whence they arise. As therefore outward Actions are denominated morally good, only from their Conformity to, or as they arise from the good Dispofitions and Motions of the Mind; so likewise they can be denominated religious upon no other account, than as they arise from the religious Motions and Dispositions of the Soul.

AND from the whole therefore it follows, that in strictness all our outward Actions and Performances have nothing commendable or rewardable in them, but will be judg'd of only by the Purity of our Hearts, and the Sincerity of our Intentions. And therefore without this Purity of Heart, be our outward Performances what they will, they are but the Form of Godliness, without the Substance and Power of it, and can stand us in no stead. And this the Scriptures do very largely fet forth in divers Forms of speaking: Thus David frequently talks of the Upright in Heart, a clean Heart, a perfect Heart, and the like, making these the necessary Conditions of obtaining the Favour of God: My Defence (says he, Psal. vii. 10.) is of God, who saveth the Upright in Heart: And Pfal. Ixxiii. 1. Truly God is good to Ifrael, even to such, i. e. to such only, as are of a clean Heart; and therefore he prays, Psal. li. 10. Create in me a clean Heart, O God, and renew a right Spirit within me: plainly implying, that all his Exactness in the Externals of Religion, was insufficient to recommend him to God's Favour: They bear the fame Relation to the internal Motions of our Mind, as our Words do to our Thoughts; and as these are of no use or fignificancy without some certain Sense affix'd to them, so neither are our Actions, any otherwife than as they are the Pictures of our Minds, and ferve to discover and express their internal Sense and To the same purpose likewise are a Disposition. great number of Passages in the New Testament. One of the Complaints St. Peter makes against some who went for Christians in his time, was, that they had Hearts exercised with covetous Practices; 2 Pet. ii. 14. upon which, notwithstanding all their outward Compliances, he calls them curfed Children, and fays, they shall receive the Reward of Unrighteousness, ver. 13. And St. Paul, in his Advice to Servants, Eph. vi. 5,6. gives them to know, that it is not enough barely to obey their Masters, and perform the external Parts of their Duty; that they ought by no means to imagine that is all that's expected of them: but, fays he, Servants be obedient unto them that are your Masters according to the Flesh, with Fear and Trembling, in Singleness of Heart, as unto Christ; not with Eye-Service, but as the Servants of Christ, doing the Will of God from the And he repeats it again, Col. iii. 22.

AND God himself likewise, by the Mouth of the Prophet Isaiah, cap. xxix. ver. 13. denounces severe Judgments against the formal Jews of that time, who like those in our Saviour's days, to whom He applies the Words of the Prophecy, were indeed very exact in performing all the Ceremonies of the Law, and in keeping the Traditions of the Elders; but were yet very far from discharging their Duty, because this People, saith the Lord, draw near me with their Mouth, and with their Lips do honour me, but have removed their Heart far from me: and for this reason God rejected all their Services. And to mention at present but one Passage more; our Lord, to that Question, Which is the great Commandment of the Law? Mat. xxii. 36. answers, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine Heart, and with all thy Soul, and with all thy Mind:

This is the first and great Commandment; and the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy self: and then adds, On these two Commandments hang all the Law and the Prophets: directly placing the whole Substance, and Power, and Esticacy of Religion in the Heart; for if all the Duties enjoin'd by God and Nature depend, as Christ assures us they do, upon the Dispositions of the Heart, then the Purity of the Heart only can render all our other Performances pure and acceptable before God.

Thus then it abundantly appears from these things, that nothing is acceptable to God but the Heart, and the Services which flow from thence. But not content to have shewn this in general, I will proceed to make it out yet more particularly of each kind of religious Actions; which may be well enough reduced to these three: 1. Human Inventions and Impositions. 2. Divine positive Institutions. And, 3. Moral Actions, such as all Works of Justice, Charity, and Beneficence, &c. which are commonly said to be good in their own nature. My Observation holds equally true of all these; for Purity of Heart only, and not any or all of these can recommend us to the Favour of God.

1. As to all human Inventions and Impositions; they being only founded on the arbitrary Will of Superiors, or our own mutual Agreement and Confent, and enforc'd only by temporal Penalties, they are of mere human Obligation, and our Obedience is only to human Authority, and shall be rewarded only with human and temporal Advantages. As they are not appointed before God, we don't know whether they are acceptable to him, and therefore we don't perform them in obedience to him, and to please him; which yet is essentially necessary to render our Actions religious and rewardable by God: for, as I have noted before, all religious Actions, which are truly such, must spring from a Sense of our Obligations to God, arifing from his excellent Nature, and our Relation to him. But now how are other Church whatever?

THE Constitution, Discipline, and Orders of the Church; the uninterrupted Succession of a Regular, Legal, Episcopal Ministry; the Rights, Powers and Privileges of the Clergy; the Sacredness of their Perfons and Characters; Articles, Confessions of Faith, and particular Sets of Opinions; are things which make a mighty noise at present, and fill the Mouths, and engage all the Zeal of many. But after all, what Foundation have any of these things in the Nature or Word of God? And what ground have we to expect that our Zeal for these things will recommend us to God? 'Tis not a Zeal for God, but for the Inventions of Man's Wisdom, and can therefore entitle only to the Favour and Acceptance of Men; and nothing but a real and true Obedience to God shall be bountifully rewarded by him in everlasting Mansions of Glory.

The Jews were very apt, if threatned with, or already fallen under any Calamity, to rend their Clothes, and mourn in Sackcloth and Ashes, according to the Custom of their Country and Time; and fondly imagin'd by these human Inventions to turn away the Wrath of the Almighty: but he by the Prophet Joel, ch.ii. ver. 12. declares against all such Services, saying, Turn to me with all your Heart and rend your Heart and not your Garments. And in Isaiah, ch. xxix. ver. 13. he complains that their Fear towards him was taught by the Precepts of Men.

Our Saviour likewise severely reproves the Pharises for their fond Attachment to the Inventions and Traditions of the Elders, which he declares render'd the Word of God of none effect, Mark vii. 13. and thereupon assures them, that it was in vain they did worship God, teaching for Doctrines the Commandments of Men, ver. 7. These very full and plain Declarations, one would think, should abate much of the Heat and Zeal too commonly shewn for human Inventions; under which Denomination come all those things which are made Boundaries and Conditions of Communion, whether by those in Authority, or by National Churches, or by particular Churches and private Perfons, and which the Scriptures have not made so. All these unwarrantable Impositions are of the same evil Nature and Tendency, and do generally equally render the Word of God of no effect. But,

2. The positive Institutions, which bear the Impressions of Divine Authority, are likewise insufficient to recommend us to the Favour of God: the most firict and punctual external Performance of them being not enough to denominate us religious; for they are not Religion, nor any ways allied to it. It is supposed, from the very nature of them, that they have no intrinsick Value, and that they are not good or obligatory in themselves before their Institution. But now if positive Institutions are only good, because commanded by a sufficient Authority, then, to render them of any use and service to us, they must be perform'd from a due Sense of the Authority of the Imposer, and purely with a View to obey and please him; and so far only as this is done, is any Action good, religious, acceptable to God, and rewardable by him. And this the Scriptures teach us very largely: Our Saviour very exprelly determines this in direct opposition to all the Rites and Ceremonies of the Law; John iv. 21. Believe me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this Mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. Ver. 23. But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true Worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in Truth. Ver. 24. God is a Spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in Spirit and in Truth; without which all their Legal Observances fignify nothing. And St. Paul, Rom. ii. 28. declares, That he is not a Jew, who is one outwardly, by observing the Ceremonies of the Law; but he is a Jew, who is one inwardly: and Circumcision is that of the Heart in the Spirit. External Circumcision therefore, tho appointed by God himfelf (and the same may be faid of all other external Ordinances) can be of no use and advantage to any without a fuitable Disposition of Heart and Mind: For, as the same Apostle fays, Gal. v. 6. Neither Circumcifion availeth any thing, nor Uncircumcifion, but Faith which works by Love. And tho the Scribes and Pharisees were noted for the most exact and punctual Performance of the Externals of Religion, yet they are frequently in the Gospels condemn'd by our Saviour. There are a great many Rules given in the Books of the Law concerning Sacrifices, which are very strictly required at the hands of the Jews; and yet for want of a suitable Dispofition of Soul, God, with Vehemence and Anger, refuses to accept of their Offerings, tho made according to his own Command in all Externals: Ifa. i. 11. To what purpose is the multitude of your Sacrifices unto me, saith the Lord? I am full of the Burnt-Offerings of Rams, and the Fat of fed Beafts; I delight not in the Blood of Bullocks, or of Lambs, or of He-Goats: When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hands, to tread my Courts? Bring no more vain Oblations, Incense is an Abomination unto me; your new Moons, and your appointed Feasts, my Soul hateth: They are a trouble unto me, I am weary to bear them. And again, Chap. lvi. ver. 2. But to this Man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite Spirit, and trembleth at my Word. He that killeth an Ox, is as if he slew a Man; he that facrificeth a Lamb, as if he cut off a Dog's Neck; he that offereth an Oblation, as if he offer'd Swines Blood; he that burneth Incense, as if he blessed an Idol. And yet all these are things of God's own Appointment and Institution, but manifestly declar'd to be infignificant, or, I should rather say, to be Sins and Abominations to the Lord, when not attended with, and flowing from a pure Heart. And the Case is exactly the same in the Nature and Reason of the thing, as to all Gospel-Ordinances: and therefore it is made a Recommendation of Gospel-Obedience, that it was from the Heart; Rom. vi. 17. were the Servants of Sin, ye have now obey'd from the Heart that Form of Doctrine which was deliver'd to you. Accordingly our Saviour himself expressy cautions us. Mat. vii. 22. and Luke xiii. 26. that many shall depend upon, and trust to their external Performances, and be able to fay in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophely'd in thy Name? and in thy Name cast out Devils? and in thy Name done many wonderful Works? We have eaten and drank in thy Presence, and thou hast taught in our Streets: And yet to these very Men, who have gone so far, and done so much, he hath affur'd us he will return that dreadful Answer, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work Iniquity. This fure must pierce every one of us to the heart, and put us upon making a very diligent Enquiry, to fee that we be not of this unhappy number: For from the whole it wery plainly appears, that God Almighty rejects and abhors his own Ordinances, when they are polluted and defiled, by being perform'd with an impure Heart; and therefore the most strict Observance of these things will be of no service to us without Purity of Heart.

3. Nay, to come to the third and last Particular, even those Moral Actions, which are commonly faid to be good in their own nature, and do indeed arise necessarily out of the nature of things, and do carry in them a Decency and Suitableness founded in the eternal unalterable Principles of Reason; such are all external Acts of natural Religion, of Justice, Charity, and mutual Beneficence; i.e. all the natural Duties to God, our Neighbour, and our felves, which are to be express'd by any external Actions: even all these, without a right Frame of Spirit and Dispofition of Heart, are useless and insignificant, and void of all real Goodness. What signify all the most fervent Expressions in Brayer without the Heart? feeing we are affur'd, I Sam. xvi. 7. that the Lord feeth not as Man feeth, for Man looketh on the outward Appearance, but the Lord looketh on the Heart: without which all our Prayers and most solemn Services are an Abomination to him. Prov. xxviii. 9. He that turneth away his Ear from hearing the Law, even his Prayer shall be Abomination; and, as David expresses it, Pfal. cix. 7. become Sin. So perfectly indifferent are all our Actions strictly in themselves, and such great Influence has the Temper and Disposition of our Hearts over them, as to make the very fame Action virtuous or vicious, the commendable Discharge of our Duty, or a heinous Sin against it. What signifies then the deceitful Worship, and all the external noisy, showy Performances, and Compliances of the Hypocrite, whose Hope shall perish, and the Congregation of Hypocrites shall be desolate, Job viii. 13. & xv. 34. Such as make their Prayers to God, whether extempore, or in a conceiv'd Form, purely to be feen of Men; or who lengthen them out with vain Babblings, and idle frivolous Petitions, thinking to be heard for their much speaking, (Mat. vi. 7.) our Saviour tells us have their Reward, and are not to expect any from his Father. All Acts of Piety and Devotion, perform'd merely from Custom or Habit, out of any View to please Men, to obtain or confirm our Reputation, or to ferve some temporal Interest, or gratify some Passion or Inclination, or from any other fuch poor, mean, felfish Motives, are of no value in the fight of God, nor will be of any fervice to us.

But I cannot enlarge so much upon this Head as I at first intended, and therefore shall only add here those very remarkable words of the Apostle, I Cor. xiii. 1, 2, 3. which are very apposite to our present purpose: The I speak with the Tongues, says he, of Men and Angele—and the I have the Gift of Prophecy, and understand all Mysteries and all Knowledge, and am right in all my Notions; and the I have all Faith, even in the highest degree, so as that I could remove Mountains—the I have the utmost Liberality and Good-Nature, and bestow all my Goods to feed the Poor; nay, and the I am so very zealous for the Gospel, that I should give my very Body to be burned alive, and have not Charity, all these things shall profit me nobing. 'Tis not therefore the bare doing these things, but the purifying our Hearts only, that will make all our other Services acceptable, and recommend us to the Favour of God, according to our Saviour's Declaration in our Text, Blessed are the pure in Heart.

I CAN'T well be misunderstood in what I have been faying, and therefore perhaps need not fay any thing here by way of Caution; however it can't be amiss just to add, that I don't mean, by any thing I have faid, to represent external Religion as utterly useless, and to be neglected by us: As the Body without the Spirit is dead, so Faith without Works is dead also; Jam. ii. 26. All our religious Actions and Services are indeed infipid and lifeless, without Purity of Heart; but then this active vital Principle of Religion cannot be hid under a Bushel, but will break out like the Sun thro a Cloud, and shine gloriously in the whole course of our Lives, and beautify all our Actions: without this none of our Actions are religious, but with it they all become Sacrifices holy, and acceptable unto God; and where it finds place, it will exert it felf irrefiftibly in a univerfal Obedience to the Laws of God and Nature: and by this alone may we judge whether this powerful fanctifying Principle be in us or not, which it very much concerns us to know.

Bur to conclude, I will only just add, that 'tis natural to make the following Inferences from what has been faid; namely,

(1.) If these external Parts of Religion are so insignificant in themselves, without being sanctify'd by a pure Heart, 'tis the most egregious Folly in those who make such a mighty stir about the lowest and meanest of these things, viz. human Ceremonies and Impositions, as if they were the very Life and Soul of all Religion: And 'twill be a sad Disappointment to these Men at last, to find all that mighty stock of Zeal, they expended on any or all of these, vanish away like Smoke, and come to nothing; and that all their Pains and Labour, from which they hoped for

for so much, is interly lost, and can entitle them to no Reward: And this will certainly be the Case.

(2.) In the second place therefore, let us from hence learn to be wife unto that which is good, (Rom. xvi. i.j.) and with all Diligence purify our Hearts, and then our Labour shall not be in vain in the Lord. Let us not rest satisfy'd with joining our selves to any particular Church, or think it enough to espouse with some warmth any particular Opinion or Practice; remembring the Pharifee in the Gospel, Luke xviii. 11, 12. could boast, that he was not as other Men are, Extortioners, Unjust, Adulterers, and the like. The Pharisees in general were very exact in observing all the Externals of Religion, but yet were not accepted with God. It is not enough to make a publick Profession of Religion, or to subscribe certain Articles of Faith, or the like: And if ye love them which love you, what Reward have you? If ye salute your Brethren only, what do ye more than others? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect, (Mat. v. 46, 47, 48.) For I say unto you, by Authority from the Son of God himself, that except your Righteousness exceed the Righteousness of the Scribes and Pharifees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, (Mat. v. 20.) But bleffed are the Pure in Heart, for they shall see God.
